"Leadership and learning are indispensable to each other." - John F. Kennedy

The ability to learn is no doubt the most important quality a leader can have – goes the famous saying...Leadership is all about "harnessing the aspirations"&"make things happen".

High on integrity, truly inspiring and being insightful are the most cherished qualities of a leader.

While each of us aspire to be one, not all, make it to the top and are successful.

No one is perfect nor born to build a strong organization. In fact, behind every successfully run business/conglomerate today, there has been an invincible & strong desire to succeed and passion further fueled by aspiration of the leadership team. It may perhaps have taken a lot of learning, unlearning, re-learning from the failures /mistakes that one has experienced in his/her journey leading to self-awareness and growth.

We constantly learn. Life is all about learning and one of the best way is to learn from the people who had led themselves. Iconic leaders charter the uncharted terrains which at times becomes extremely eventful and defining moments. Challenging assignments often lead to strong anchoring, supportive associations lead to enrichment, developing skill & competencies lead to deeper insights. The choices one makes and the challenges one takes are the life defining moments. These learnings are those "Pearls of wisdom" which is priceless and not to be missed.

With this background in mind, we realized that it would be only appropriate to have an exclusive Conclave by Who's Who of the Corporate World with proven business prowess, sharing of learning and experiences to a select group of audience.

Learning Methodology

Story-telling method

Corporate leaders are expected to share their thoughts on various aspects of leadership which will help the practicing and budding managers to navigate through this difficult but exciting time.
